Kudos

ISD thanks Alice M. Craft, who has made a generous donation to ISD as a memorial to Mike Eisele.

The funds will be given to the Support Services Center to help ISD continue to provide the best possible counselling and educational environment to students. Ms. Craft's thoughtfulness and support of the school and its students are very much appreciated.

Cheerleading Sponsor Wanted

A sponsor is needed for ISD's cheer squads for 'the 94 - '95 school year. To apply or for additional information, contact Athletic Director Marsha Wetzel (317) 924-8408 TTY.

Transitions

The Neutral Zone

Ann Titus, Transition Consultant

William Bridges, in his book Managing Transitions, has named the second phase of transition the "Neutral Zone." He explains that after people have begun to let go of old ways they enter into a time that may be confusing and discouraging. The new ways are not completely clear and are not comfortable. People may feel that the old rules, habits, opinions, have been thrown out but they are not sure what the new rules, habits, and opinions are supposed to look like.

Take this short test to see if you are in the Neutral Zone.

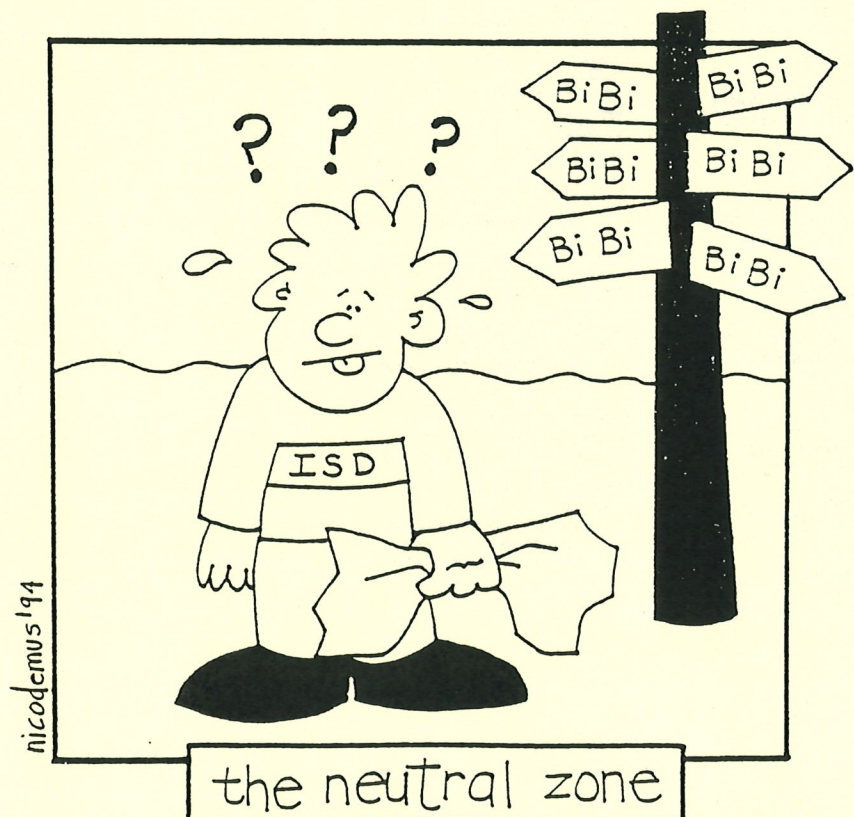

- 1) Do you ever feel so much anxiety about coming to work that you call in sick for a "mental health day?"
- 2) Do you find that you spend most of your time and energy trying to keep up and have no time to plan ahead and organize?
- 3) Do you get the feeling that two "Camps" have developed at the school and have divided the ISD community?
- 4) Does it seem that some people know what is happening at the school while most people get information second-hand and that information is often wrong?
- 5) Are you afraid that if you make one mistake your job is at risk?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, chances are you are in the Neutral Zone phase of change at ISD. These feelings are absolutely normal and are the result of change. With change, we decide to end the old attitudes and behaviors. Once we let go of the old, it takes time for the new attitudes and behaviors to become clear and to feel comfortable. This is the Neutral Zone. The Neutral Zone can be a very frightening time for an organization. People feel lost. Communication breaks down easily. Often two or more camps will develop within the organization. People become afraid to make mistakes because they are unsure about what is expected of them.

Negative aspects notwithstanding, the Neutral Zone is necessary. People in an organization need this time to create new attitudes and habits. The Neutral Zone is the time for people to come together and create the new system.

The Neutral Zone cannot be bypassed or rushed. There are ways to help manage the Neutral Zone to make it easier to cope with. We will have more about these strategies for managing the Neutral Zone in next week's Campus Bulletin.
